Company Description†

Mid Wynd International Investment Trust plc ("the Company") aims to achieve capital and income growth by investing on a worldwide basis. Although the Company aims to provide dividend growth over time, its primary aim is to maximise total returns to shareholders.

Since 1st October 2023, the portfolio is managed by the Lazard Global Quality Growth team. The team aims to achieve capital growth by investing in global stocks, selecting what it considers to be high-quality companies ("Compounders") with specific growth characteristics. These are companies the team believes will generate high returns on capital, meaning they are efficient at turning capital – the money used to run a business – into cash and profits. These businesses typically reinvest the money they make into their businesses at similarly high returns on capital to help them grow over the long term, potentially making these companies more valuable in the future. Prior to Lazard's appointment, the portfolio was managed by Artemis Investment Management.

† There is no assurance that the Mid Wynd International Investment Trust plc's objectives or performance targets will be achieved.

Commentary

Global equity markets fell in September, as questions about the outlook for global inflation and artificial intelligence (AI) persisted. Information technology and communication services holdings contributed most to performance. Holdings in industrials and financials detracted. Apple rose after reporting record second-quarter results supported by strong product cycles for its flagship products, iPhone and Mac. The company continues to innovate on this front, releasing the iPhone 18 Pro and 18 Pro Max in mid-September and the highly anticipated iPhone Duo in late October. Life science company Thermo Fisher rose after reporting stronger-than-expected second-quarter results and better guidance, driven by solid performance across all its end markets, marking a reversal from the demand uncertainty that had been weighing on the stock and the broader life science industry. Shares of insurance broker Aon fell during the quarter, as investor sentiment was weighed down by the significant new debt required to fund the company's acquisition of USI Insurance Services. However, we are constructive on the strategic merits of the deal, given it solidifies Aon as one of the largest US middle-market brokers (one of the fastest-growing areas of insurance), while driving revenue and expense synergies, in our view. Shares of leading global credit bureau Experian declined during the period. Investor sentiment was pressured by regulatory uncertainty in US mortgage credit reporting, raising concerns about future mortgage-related volumes and pricing for the bureaus. However, Experian only makes approximately 5% of revenues from mortgages, which is the lowest among its peers. Experian has a long track record of adapting to market shifts by entering adjacencies and scaling new revenue opportunities, and we believe it is well positioned to do the same in the current AI environment.

Important Information

Risks

The value of your investment may rise or fall, and your capital is at risk.

Any investment in an investment trust involves risk. You should be aware of the following risks when considering investing:

Past performance

Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future returns and does not guarantee future results.

The value of your investment

The value of shares, and any income from them, can fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount invested.

Market volatility

The value of the Company and any income from it can fall or rise because of movements in stock markets, currencies and interest rates, each of which can move irrationally and be affected unpredictably by diverse factors, including political and economic events.

Emerging and Developing Markets

Emerging and developing markets can face significant political, economic or structural challenges. The portfolio may experience delays in buying, selling and claiming ownership of investments and there is an increased risk that the portfolio may not get back the money invested.

Concentration

In view of the concentrated nature of the portfolio, the level of risk is expected to be higher than for broader based portfolios and the value may be more volatile.

Smaller companies

Securities of smaller companies may be less liquid, and exhibit more volatile returns, than the securities of larger companies.

Currency

The Company's assets may be priced in currencies other than the portfolio base currency. Changes in currency exchange rates can therefore affect the Company's value.

Charges from capital

Where charges are taken wholly or partly out of the Company's capital, distributable income may be increased at the expense of capital, which may constrain or erode capital growth.

Leverage

The Company may operate with a significant amount of leverage. Leverage occurs when the economic exposure created by the use of derivatives is greater than the amount invested. Leverage may result in large fluctuations in the Company's value and therefore entails a high degree of risk including the risk that losses may be substantial.
